THE WORLD THIS WEEK

By ROBERT PATTERSON

Just an Ace Up the Sleeve

There's one feature of America's hand in the current European poker game that's strictly a premiere performance. It's that handy ace up America's diplomatic sleeve. As the German war machine raced across Europe, the men of the treasury department kept pace with the Stukas and Panzer divisions. As fast as each nation was conquered, its funds and investments in the United States were placed under lock and key. The resulting reserve of frozen capital, now estimated at more than $3,500,000,000, is backing America's high card in the current game of power politics. The final word on the stake awaits the final play of the game. The funds may be restored, if responsible governments are established. A more pleasant prospect for America is the possibility that these funds may be balanced against the $14,500,000,000 still owed us on World War I. Meanwhile, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau holds onto his high card: "I'm just sitting on the funds and waiting to see what will happen!"

For the Wheels of Defense!

Buried beneath the miles of statistics that spread through the business news of the week is this simple statement: "Imports of rubber into the United States have almost doubled in the past month over the same month in 1939." There is evidence in that simple statement that America's program of national defense is actually on the move. Few materials are more important to the war machines of 1940 than rubber. In no basic war resource is the United States more dependent on extra-continental sources. The rise in imports to 420,378 tons this year compared to 263,496 in the same period last year gives ample proof that the men who man America's defense bulwarks have begun the job.

A Release for Rieber

The dangers of hysterical nationalism were never better exemplified than in the wave of resentment that has forced the resignation of Torkhild Rieber from the executive staff of one of the nation's leading oil companies. Captain Rieber is an industrialist of the old school. He has built oil fields, blasted an oil line through jungles, and sent his ships into every corner of the world. As one of the leading American businessmen, he could be a pillar of national defense. His position has now been endangered by his resignation, a resignation forced upon him as a result of business relations with a Nazi commercial agent, Dr. Gerhard A. Westrick. Dr. Westrick is an obvious Nazi propagandist. As such he should be exposed. Captain Rieber is an American citizen. As such he should be given a hearing before a final decision is made. There is no greater danger than this, that we shall destroy ourselves in our haste to destroy our attackers.

"When the Wife's Away," also a comedy, is cast with LBen Howard as Walter Carlton; Lenore Weaver as Joan Carlton; Archie Keesling as Johnny Miller, Cartlon's friend; Elfrieda Anderson, as Marie Norton, Miller's fiancee; Theodora Herold as Cleopatra, an ex-actress; Ira Grim as Dr. Killem.

Mrs. Archie Keesling is directing the three plays.

The music preceding and between the acts will be furnished by the Mt. Hamilton Juvenile Grange orchestra, consisting of eleven members from various parts of the county, directed by Mervin Keesling of Campbell.

Mitchell Lobrovich of Campbell is enrolled as a sophomore at Santa Clara university, where classes began work yesterday.

Mrs. William M. Burnett and son Richard, returned Sunday from a two weeks visit with relatives in Casmalia, Santa Barbara county.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hudson of Alice avenue, left Saturday to spend several days at Pinecrest, Tuolomne county.

Friends Honor Dr. W. R. Morgan At Surprise Party

Mrs. W. R. Morgan entertained a group of friends Wednesday evening as a surprise for Dr. Morgan, whose natal day was the occasion for the festivity.

Children's costumes in which the guests arrived created a great deal of amusement. G. E. Farley was voted the prize for his choice of raiment.

The honor guest was presented with a choice collection of toys, and refreshments were in keeping with the theme of the evening, even to a musical birthday cake.

In the bridge games which furnished diversion, Mrs. Hyde and Mr. Leverton had high scores.

Numerous artistically arranged bouquets decorated the rooms.

The date was the birthday also of one of the guests, Ralph Hyde.

Sharing in the occasion were Messrs. and Mesdames R. H. Hyde, C. B. Field, G. E. Farley, J. O. Leverton, R. G. Archibald, J. C. Agostinho, W. H. Van Dyke and the hosts.

Local Boy Enlists In U. S. Navy

Raymond Douglas Carpenter, 20, son of John R. Carpenter, 35 Dillon avenue, was enlisted at the U. S. Marine Corps Recruiting station in San Jose, and was transferred to the Marine Corps base, San Diego, for initial training. Upon completion of this training, he will be eligible for duty aboard ship or at a foreign post.

It is expected that he will take advantage of the opportunities the Marine Corps offers young men who are interested in radio, aviation, music, clerical, mechanical and other technical lines.

Mrs. Hans Severi of Sanger is visiting her sister, Mrs. Ira Abbott and family for a few days.

Eine Olga Berry Is Bride Of Ray V. Pedrotti

Miss Eine Olga Berry, a former resident of Campbell, was married in Eureka, July 28, to Ray V. Pedrotti, Jr., of that city.

Miss Berry is one of the three daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Berry who resided on Railroad avenue.

After graduation from the Campbell schools and San Jose State college she taught in the Yreka and Eureka high schools.

Her sister, Mrs. George B. Brown (Yeni Berry), was her matron of honor and sister Emmi Berry of San Francisco and Miss Esther Hunter of Watsonville were bridesmaids.

George Lowry of Eureka acted as best man for the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Pedrotti will make their home in Eureka.

Campbell Press Favors Present Sewer Board

Campbell was very fortunate in the citizens elected to serve on its first board of directors for the Sanitary Sewer district, and now that the terms of three of these members will soon expire, it is gratifying that they have been induced to be candidates to succeed themselves.

Members of the board are all very busy men and required considerable urging before consenting to be candidates again, if petitions were circulated for them.

Many unkind remarks have been made about the members of the board profiting financially. No one of these men would devote the hours and hours to solving the problems involved in this work and its financing for any thing short of real salaries if it was pay in which they were interested, and no one but their families does know the length of those hours that have been and will be spent in this public service.

Sewer District Election to be Held Sept. 16

On Monday, Sept. 16, an election will be held to choose three directors and assessor for the sanitary sewer district board.

After the election of the directors in 1938 they drew lots for the long and short terms and the three getting the short terms were Charles E. De Selle, Dr. W. I. Merrill and Ross Trowbridge. The other two are J. O. Leverton and W. F. Grattan.

G. E. Farley was elected assessor. All of these whose terms expire will be candidates for re-election.

Anyone who desires to be a candidate may secure a nominating petition at the Campbell Water company office, which, when signed by not less than five nor more than twenty citizens, may have a place on the ballot. Petitions must be in by August 28.

The election will be held in the Campbell Union grammar school, and the election board will be J. W. Knowles, inspector, Mrs. Jeanette Grizzle and Mrs. Lillian Frazier, judges.

Evening Blaze Attracts Crowd

The wailing of the fire siren about 7:30 Monday evening, followed by a spectacular blaze attracted crowds of spectators to the southeastern part of town, where a gravel plant on Kennedy avenue was seriously damaged.

The Campbell Fire company was aided by a suppression troop from the Alma fire station.

Origin of the blaze is thought to have been in an electric switch box which short circuited and fired a 100 gallon tank of oil. A gravel pit conveyor, electric motor and a truck were destroyed with an estimated loss of some $6500.

The plant, built at a cost of $35,000 was just ready for commercial production, having been operated but a few days.

The members of the firm are all from neighboring communities.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Bohnett attended the annual fiest at Santa Barbara last week and visited the Floyd Bohnett family. They report the latter very attractively and happily situated.

The Sigma Sigma club of the Congregational church is holding a rummage sale beginning today through Thursday, Aug. 29, in the Decker market building on North Central, where the Guild conducts a thrift shop. The room will be open from 10 a. m. to 6:30 p. m.

House guests at the Ira Abbott home Friday and Saturday were Mrs. Abbott's brother Elmer Black and wife, and daughter Ernestine.

Ladies' Night of Kiwanis Club Is Delightful Affair

The Kiwanis wives who were in charge of the club's meeting Tuesday evening presented a delightful program and created a lot of merry making.

President Herold Morton opened the meeting and named Mrs. Ralph Hyde president pro tem and she did honor to the station, with Mrs. J. O. Leverton as her "cup bearer."

Mrs. Herbert Shadle led the community singing, for which Mrs. David Rutherford was accompanist. Mrs. Rutherford also played for Miss Letha Medlin, whose vocal selections were "Cielito Lindo," "Music In My Dreams," and "Serenade To The Stars."

Miss Medlin, whose home is in Modesto, is spending several weeks here at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Leverton.

To Mrs. Carl Field was accorded the privilege of introducing the speaker, Mrs. Ruth Comfort Mitchell Young of Los Gatos and Riverdale, who in her charming and inimitable way told of their 13 years' experiences on a dairy ranch in the San Joaquin valley, and of the migrant problem in the valley, and what has been and is being accomplished to solve the problems and alleviate conditions.

In reviewing her book "Of Human Kindness" she stated that she wished to correct the impression that it was written in answer to Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath," as it was all plotted and named before his book came out, but she did do further investigation before completing her story.

Other guests beside Miss Medlin and Mrs. Young, were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ferro, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Keesling, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Paul, Mrs. Mary Palmer, Mrs. Nellie Rutherford, Mrs. Florence Severin, Mrs. Edna Smith, Robert Agostinho and Wilbur Morton.

President Morton announced for next week a talk on the "Far East" by the Rev. J. H. Bennett who has very recently attended lectures at Mills college.

Considerable amusement was created at the meeting by one of the wives bringing up the items appearing in a morning paper, regarding the name and location of the local club, and the garbled names of members visiting the YMCA camp at Boulder Creek Sunday where five Campbell boys are enjoying a vacation, which is sponsored by the club.

These boys are Ray Brown, Bobby and Jimmy Loveday, Milo Benner and Billy Green.

Enjoying the day at the camp were Herold Morton and Messrs. and Mesdames Joe Agostinho, Lowell Benson, J. O. Leverton, Jack Murdock and Mark Purmort. Harold Bailey, director of the camp is a member of the local club.

NOW LET'S VOTE!

California has a record registration of 3,782,702 voters qualified for the primary election next week—a healthy sign of good citizenship.

But to register is not enough. Now, let's get out and vote—and vote intelligently!

In past years, tens of thousands of voters have skipped the primary, contenting themselves with going to the polls at the general election, apparently on the assumption that the primary is lacking in importance. Nothing could be farther from the truth. In California, most congressmen and legislators—not to mention many local officials—are elected at the primary. If you wait until the general election, in many instances it will be too late. And the man you wanted to represent you may be left at the post, just because you and too many others were missing at the ballot booth.

No matter how you vote, next Tuesday VOTE!

AMERICA'S LABOR DAY

September 2 this year will mark the most poignant contrasts in the history of the labor movement in the modern world. Only in the United States may millions of workers gather under bomber-free skies, form their proud, free ranks, and march beneath the banners of a thousand unions down the streets their hands have paved and through the cities their brawn has built. In France, labor bows to the bayonet of the conqueror and to the decrees of a puppet government. The voice of labor is stilled, as the voice of freedom is stilled, in a dozen stricken countries.

Yet the contrast has always been sharp between America's Labor Day and the Day in other lands. The staid Encyclopaedia Britannica states: "Celebration of the day in the United States differs from that in Europe in that it is participated in by all classes and marked by the closing of all factories and stores, and by meetings, picnics, parades, speeches, athletic events and other holiday activities."

Never, in most tranquil times, has European labor had such a day. Labor Day, over there, has been a day for labor groups apart—for them to think part and feel and plan apart from the nation. Over here the Day, "participated in by all classes," has been a splendid expression of the spirit of American democracy—a day whereon the ranks of labor halt to look at their handiwork and receive the acclaim of their neighbors, but where they do not celebrate alone. It isn't just Labor's Day here—it is all America's Labor Day. That such a holiday, with all that it connotes, is still celebrated in the greatest nation of all history, should make of September 2 a day of hope for lands where hope itself is all but blacked out.

CUPID'S BLITZKRIEG

With all the audacity he displayed in outwitting locksmiths as per the old legends, the little guy with the arrows and three-cornered pants is outfoxing and laughing at the mighty god of war.

Threatened with interruption of romance through the calling of young men to the colors, Cupid is staging an effective advance blitzkrieg of his own in the marriage license bureaus of the nation. From Maine to California, the wedding rate has upswung remarkably during the last few weeks. Some cynics hold that Dan is scaring young men into rushing to say "I do" before Uncle Sam says "You'll do." But that seems a crusty, sourpuss viewpoint, applying to a small minority. No doubt the uncertainties of the times have caused many engaged couples to advance their wedding dates so they may be sure of happiness together, even if brief, in an unpredictable world. And unluckiness in love looms only for the few lads who may wed solely to escape a draft. If and when the little lady finds out she was wooed through such selfish and unromantic motives—and ladies' intuition is uncannily sure in this field—the bridegroom may long for the tranquillity of life among tanks and dive bombers.

All such speculation is beside the point, however. The important, cheerful thing is that Dan Cupid once more is demonstrating that he has power to blitzkrieg anything and everything, now and forever, that may interfere with his plans. More power to him.

POLITICAL PARADE

By CLEM WHITAKER

Adequate defense against an enemy power, in this era of blitzkrieg, isn't just a matter of anti-aircraft batteries, trained troops, battle cruisers and swift fighter planes to intercept the invader.

Quite often, politics determines the tide of battle. It did, for example, in France, just a few weeks ago. There was rotten concrete in the Maginot Line, put there by grafting or stupid politiciens. There were saboteurs and spies in vital industries. There was complete lack of leadership and woeful incompetence in government.

Under the circumstances, California needs to take a sharp squint at California's home defense—and at the men who are building it. And it might be said at the outset that the picture is somewhat reassuring. The California state legislature, whatever else its faults, is not lacking in patriotism, and it has set in motion a fundamental defense program of vital importance.

Under special authority from the legislature to build an airtight defense in California against any form of blitzkrieg—whether from within or without—the Joint Legislative Fact-Finding committee on Employment, headed by Senator John Phillips of Banning, appointed a board a few months ago known as the Legislative Advisory committee on Defense and Employment. And the board, composed of fifteen outstanding citizens, each a leader in his own field of endeavor, has been hard at work—gearing all phases of industrial, manufacturing, transportation and communication facilities so they will mesh smoothly into the national defense program; determining what legislative enactments will be needed to clear the decks for action; tackling complicated problems, with a minimum of publicity, but with expertness and surprising efficiency.

As an example, the board has just appointed a special sub-committee in charge of radio communications. The members aren't politicians; they are recognized leaders in radio—Alfred H. Meyer, radio engineer and president of the Leo J. Meyberg company of San Francisco, who was an instructor in electrical communications during the World War; Lewis Allen Weiss of Los Angeles, general manager of the Mutual-Don Lee network; Fox Case of Hollywood, representing Columbia broadcasting; Charles F. Scott of Visalia's KTKC; and Arthur Westlund of KRE at Berkeley.

In the railroad industry, the power industry, in every form of manufacturing, in organized labor, in technological fields, in the press, in aircraft—in every industry—the legislature's board has its key men, all working quietly, to fortify California's home defense. And there isn't an incompetent in a carload!

Not This One; The Other One

By IRVIN S. COBB

THERE formerly were two Coveleskie brothers playing in the Big Leagues. One day Harry Coveleskie was pitching a game for Detroit against the Yankees at the Polo Grounds in New York. As Damon Runyon sat in the press stand an attendant handed him a note which had been sent by one of a group of spectators in a grandstand box.

The note ran as follows:

"To settle a bet, please state which one of the Coveleskie boys this fellow is."

Runyon turned the note over and made his answer on the reverse side of it.

"This," he wrote, "is the other one!"

Clubwoman: Wagewoman: Homewoman—

SHE'S THE SAME PERSON, when she goes to a store.

At her club meeting, it's kind of fun to hear some radical lecturer "prove" that most manufacturers are slickers, most store cheese is chalk, and most advertising is ballyhoo.

But watch the clubwoman when she starts buying. She wants her money's worth and she gets it. How? By first consulting the advertisements. Then by choosing the products she knows—the trade-marked, nationally advertised products that have been on the market for years.

Those trade-marked, advertised articles are the ARISTOCRATS among all the things she buys—or that any of us can buy.

pine government to suspend all national defense preparations seems at peculiar cross-purposes with current world conditions. Perhaps President Quezon reasons in this manner: If we are partially prepared, America will turn us loose in the world. If we are totally defenseless, America will not dare to remove her protection. The suspension of defense preparations highlights the unreality of our relations with the islands. If we are to defend the Philippines, we should demand their cooperation and begin construction of a Jap-tight barrier at once. If we are actually to grant the islands independence, we should make no pretense of assistance and should withdraw as soon as possible from an exposed position. Now or later the Philippines must realize that they cannot have their cake and eat it. Guns or butter, they must choose!

Willkie Speech Of Acceptance Thrills Nation

Republican Candidate for President Outlines Policies Before Vast Audience at Elwood.

ELWOOD, IND.—Coming back to this, the town in which he was born and grew to young manhood, and before a wildly enthusiastic audience of many thousands, Wendell Willkie accepted the nomination for President on the Republican ticket.

In that acceptance Mr. Willkie promised the kind of leadership that will keep America a nation of free men, a nation of prosperous people, a nation offering opportunity for all.

He said: "An acceptance speech is a candidate's keynote, a declaration of his broad principles. It cannot possibly review the issues in detail. I shall, however, cover each of them frankly during this campaign. Here I give you an outline of the political philosophy that is in my heart. We are here today to represent a sacred cause—the preservation of American democracy.

"Obviously, I cannot lead this cause alone. I need the help of every American—Republican, Democrat or Independent—Jew, Catholic, or Protestant—people of every color, creed, and race. Party lines are down. Nothing could make that clearer than the nomination by the Republicans of a liberal Democrat who changed his party affiliation because he found democracy in the Republican party and not in the New Deal party.

Thunderous applause greeted Willkie's statement that party lines are down. When he said the times demanded the help of Americans from every walk, the cheers came wave upon wave, the vast crowd having sensed that it typified that very thought. Here were a hundred thousand Americans from every part of the United States, representing every faith, every station of life, yet carried away by a single devotion.

Mr. Willkie briefly sketched his boyhood in Elwood and told of his ancestors who, "like the ancestors of millions of Americans, lived in central Europe. They were humble people—not members of the ruling or wealthy classes. Their opportunities were restricted by discriminatory laws and class distinctions. One was exiled because of his religion; another was persecuted because he believed in the principles of the French revolution; and still another was jailed for insisting on the right of free speech. As their descendant, I have fought from boyhood against all those restrictions, discriminations and tyrannies. And I am still fighting."

Foreign Policy.

Mr. Willkie compared the peace of America with the conditions in war-torn Europe, and defined his foreign policy by saying:

"No man is so wise as to foresee what the future holds or to lay out a plan for it. No man can guarantee to maintain peace. Peace is not something that a nation can achieve by itself. It also depends on what some other country does. It is neither practical, nor desirable, to adopt a foreign program committing the United States to future action under unknown circumstances.

"The best that we can do is to decide what principle shall guide us.

"For me, that principle can be simply defined:

"In the foreign policy of the United States, as in its domestic policy, I would do everything to defend American democracy and I would refrain from doing anything that would injure it.

"We must not permit our emotions—our sympathies or hatreds—to move us from that fixed principle."

Again the crowd let out a deafening cheer. It was an exciting moment. A nation was waiting anxiously to hear Mr. Willkie's views on foreign relations. The enthusiastic response of the crowd reflected a nation thrilled.

National Defense.

From foreign policy Willkie turned to national defense of which he said in part:

"We must not shirk the necessity of preparing our sons to take care of themselves in case the defense of America leads to war. I shall not undertake to analyze the legislation on this subject that is now before congress, or to examine the intentions of the administration with regard to it. I concur with many members of my party, that these intentions must be closely watched. Nevertheless, in spite of these considerations, I cannot ask the American people to put their faith in me, without recording my conviction that some form of selective service is the only democratic way in which to secure the trained and competent manpower we need for national defense."

He stated in definite terms his belief in a policy of providing to the opponents of force the material resources of this nation, and our own preparation for meeting any emergency that may arise, but criticized the President in his conduct of foreign affairs at this critical time, saying:

"There have been occasions when many of us have wondered if he is deliberately inciting us to war. I trust that I have made it plain that in the defense of America, and of our liberties, I should not hesitate to stand for war. But like a great many other Americans I saw what war was like at first hand in 1917. I know what war can do to demoralize civil liberties at home. And I believe it to be the first duty of a President to try to maintain peace.

"But Mr. Roosevelt has not done this. He has dabbled in inflammatory statements and manufactured panics. Of course, we in America like to speak our minds freely, but this does not mean that at a critical period in history our President should cause bitterness and confusion for the sake of a little political oratory. The President's attacks on foreign powers have been useless and dangerous. He has courted a war for which the country is hopelessly unprepared—and which it emphatically does not want. He has secretly meddled in the affairs of Europe, and he has even unscrupulously encouraged other countries to hope for more help than we are able to give.

" 'Walk softly and carry a big stick' was the motto of Theodore Roosevelt. It is still good American doctrine for 1940. Under the present administration the country has been placed in the false position of shouting insults and not even beginning to prepare to take the consequences."

Cheers Interrupt.

Several times the speaker was compelled to stop as applause and encouraging shouts drowned out his voice. The cheers grew in volume and frequency as Mr. Willkie, citing France as a tragic example, declared in a firm voice that our foreign policy must "begin in the United States" and be dedicated to making us strong "right here in our own land."

Referring to the defeat of France, Mr. Willkie said in part:

"And in this tragedy let us find our lesson. The foreign policy of the United States begins right here in our own land. The first task of our country in its international affairs is to become strong at home. We must regain prosperity, restore the independence of our people, and protect our defensive forces. If that is not done promptly we are in constant danger. If that is done no enemy on earth dare attack us. I propose to do it.

". . . I promise, by returning to those same American principles that overcame German autocracy once before, both in business and in war, to outdistance Hitler in any contest he chooses in 1940 or after. And I promise that when we beat him, we shall beat him on our own terms, in our own American way."

A Doctrine of Growth.

For our home policy Mr. Willkie proposes to follow a doctrine of increased production, of increased growth, instead of the New Deal "doctrine of division," and said:

"We are not asked to make more for ourselves. We are asked to divide among ourselves that which we already have. The New Deal doctrine does not seek risk, it seeks safety. Let us call it the "I pass" doctrine. The New Deal dealt it, and refused to make any more bets on the American future.

"Why, that is exactly the course France followed to her destruction! Like the Blum government in France, so has our government become entangled in unfruitful political adventures. As in France, so here, we have heard talk of class distinctions and of economic groups preying upon other groups.

"As for me, I want to say here and now that there is no hate in my heart, and that there will be none in my campaign. It is my belief that there is no hate in the hearts of any group of Americans for any other group—except as the New Dealers seek to put it there for political purposes. I stand for a new companionship in an industrial society.

"Because I am a business man, formerly connected with a large company, the doctrinaires of the opposition have attacked me as an opponent of liberalism. But I was a liberal before many of these men had heard the word, and I fought for many of the reforms of the elder LaFollette, Theodore Roosevelt, and Woodrow Wilson before another Rooseveit adopted—and distorted—liberalism.

Opposed to Monopolies.

"I believe that the forces of free enterprise must be regulated. I am opposed to business monopolies. I believe in collective bargaining, by representatives of labor's own free choice, without any interference and in full protection of those obvious rights. I believe in the maintenance of minimum standard for wages and of maximum standards for hours. I believe that such standards should constantly improve. I believe in the federal regulation of interstate utilities, of securities markets, and of banking. I believe in federal pensions, in adequate old age benefits, and in unemployment allowances.

"I believe that the federal government has a responsibility to equalize the lot of the farmer, with that of the manufacturer. If this cannot be done by parity of prices, other means must be found—with the least possible regimentation of the farmer's affairs. I believe in the encouragement of co-operative buying and selling, and in the full extension of rural electrification. But American liberalism does not consist merely in reforming things. It consists also in making things.

"And I say that we must henceforth ask certain questions of every reform, and of every law to regulate business or industry. We must ask: Has it encouraged our industries to produce? Has it created new opportunities for our youth? Will it increase our standard of living? Will it encourage us to open up a new and bigger world?"

New Deal Victims.

Mr. Willkie demanded that kind of legislation, that policy, that will encourage business to expand, to create jobs for the unemployed, saying:

"It is a statement of fact, and no longer a political accusation, that the New Deal has failed in its program of economic rehabilitation. And the victims of its failure are the very persons whose cause it professes to champion.

"The little business men are victims because their chances are more restricted than ever before.

"The farmers are victims because many of them are forced to subsist on what is virtually a dole, under centralized direction from Washington.

"The nine or ten million unemployed are victims because their chances for jobs are fewer.

"Approximately 6,000,000 families are victims because they are on relief.

"And unless we do something about it soon, 130,000,000 people—an entire nation—will become victims, because they stand in need of a defense system which this administration has so far proved itself powerless to create anywhere except on paper.

"To accomplish these results, the present administration has spent $60,000,000,000.

Mr. Willkie Accepts.

"I accept the nomination of the Republican party for President of the United States.

"I accept it in the spirit in which I know it was given at our convention in Philadelphia—the spirit of dedication. I herewith dedicate myself with all my heart, with all my mind, and with all my soul to making this nation strong.

"But I say this, too. In the pursuit of that goal I shall not lead you down the easy road. If I am chosen the leader of this democracy as I am now of the Republican party, I shall lead you down the road of sacrifice and of service to your country.

"What I am saying is a far harsher thing than I should like to say in this speech of acceptance—a far harsher thing than I would have said had the Old World not been swept by war during the past year. I am saying to you that we cannot rebuild our American democracy without hardship, without sacrifice, even without suffering. I am proposing that course to you as a candidate for election by you."

When the speaker finished, the crowd went wild with enthusiasm. Hats went up in the air and shouts of "Hurrah for Willkie" came from many thousands. They left the great meeting repeating to each other the words "Willkie—the Hope of America."
